

Not Your Grandfather's GOATS!

Multi-species animal management is increasingly becoming a feature in many agricultural operations in Oklahoma and surrounding states, thanks to growing producer interest in the potential benefits of raising meat goats as a way to diversify and strengthen profit margins.

Oklahoma State University's Division of Agricultural Sciences and Natural Resources provides a number of informative and skill-building resources designed to help beginning and experienced producers alike get the most out of their investments in time, energy, money and management.

GOAT MEAT PRODUCTION

Meat Goat MANUAL

Manual covers meat goat production basics, including herd health, general herd management, marketing, fencing, predator control, forages and nutrition. Available online or any OSU county Extension office.

Boot CAMP

Boot Camp is a 3-day workshop that mixes hands-on and classroom education. Over 40 hours of education experience is available, typically in October.

Videos

For producers who want the flexibility of learning at their own pace, OSU offers videos of many goat educational sessions. Available online or on DVD.
